SPRING 2025

“As gardeners, we are by nature optimistic”

Gardening is a creative hobby which requires some effort, “sometimes we have to get it wrong to get it right”, for which you are handsomely rewarded. Most plants are easy to grow, provided a few ground rules are followed.

Lilies and dahlias are necessary in the garden as they flower for such a lengthy period from the summer months into autumn; I have included some new varieties along with re-introducing some old favourites to choose from to suit each position in the garden, both for borders and pots.

I am also pleased to announce the return of a couple of my old favourite plants, such as Alstroemeria and Lily of the Valley; we have managed to increase our stocks to a sustainable level.

The weather this year has been a talking point as always, but as gardeners, we are by nature optimistic, I look forward to the long summer evenings enjoying the benefits of all our work.

I hope you consider my catalogue worthy of your attention, and I look forward to receiving your order, which, as always, will be expedited with all due care and attention.

On a personal note, thank you for your continued support over the years. We look forward to being of continued service to you this Spring.

I wish you all a happy and healthy 2025.

Chris Blom

Dahlias

No plants have such a variety of colour or wealth of blooms as dahlias.

DAHLIA CLASSIFICATIONS

Dahlias are classified by flower size and form, ranging from simple blooms to elaborate creations.

POM	POM-POM DAHLIA	SA	STELLAR FLOWERED

Dahlias are essential for a vibrant, long-lasting garden display from summer through autumn. Their extended flowering is invaluable, and I've selected our varieties for exceptional garden performance, from Café au Lait's creamy flowers or Bishop of Llandaff's dramatic dark foliage and scarlet flowers, you'll find some brilliant new introductions alongside beloved classics, perfect for borders or containers.

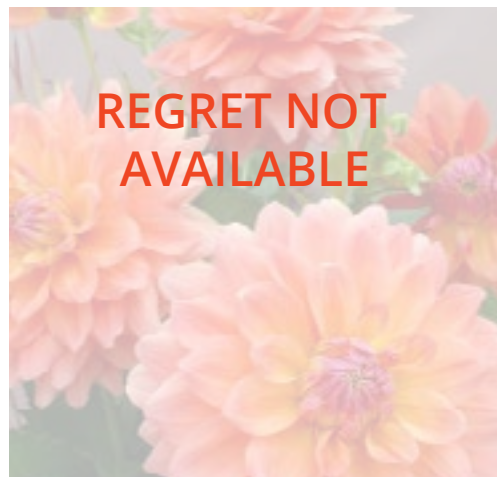

Investing in high-quality dahlia tubers makes all the difference. Strong, healthy tubers establish quickly, producing more vigorous plants with abundant flowers. You'll enjoy a longer flowering season, improved disease resistance, and a more impressive display in your garden.

"There is nothing like the first hot days of spring when the gardener stops wondering if it's too soon to plant the dahlias and starts wondering if it's too late"

HENRY MITCHELL

Lilies

Lilies are an ideal border plant, their exquisite flowers, exotic fragrances, varying heights and shapes, and amazing colour spectrum make them a perfect focal point for any border. Used on the patio they are truly one of the more exotic and majestic of plants.

Apart from some of the very early flowering species, lilies should be planted early in the year. The earlier you plant them, the better. Unlike most bulbs, lilies do not have any protective outside tunic. The plants' nutrients are stored in the fleshy scales, which can become damaged and dry if stored for too long.

The ideal time for planting is the spring. The bulbs are harvested late in November and through December, weather dependant, and at this stage the bulbs are fresh, full of nutrients, and disease free. They are not dormant, and therefore, they need to be planted as soon as possible.

ASIATIC HYBRIDS

Some of the earliest to flower (June/July) and amongst the easiest to grow. They cover the whole colour spectrum, except blue and their compact nature makes them of great value for use a naturalistic setting in the border.

Corsage

A truly stunning lily; the flowers are of pale pink and yellow with freckling towards the base of the bloom.
